A LITTLE HISTORY ATTACH-ED TO WAGNER'S OLD GLOVE.

Ever see the old glove which Honus Wagner wears on his big left hand? No? Well, here it is Many another would be ashamed of it but not the only Honus. Wagner would not part with it for love or money. There is a history to the glove. Wagper himself has forgotten just when he got it, but he thinks it was back about 1902. Honus knows that Herman Long, once the greatest of all shortstops, then playing with the Boston team, gave him the glove. It is a fact that Long always used a giove with a big hole in the center of it. He would buy a new glove and at once cut it to pieces, leaving an open spot in the center about twice the size of a baseball. Long handed over one of his old gloves to Wagner. It suited him, and he has used it ever since. The glove now is a wornout relic, but Hans bangs to it like grim death. He figures it would be the worst luck in the world for him to lose it. Fans have time and again watched Wagner take that glove off his big left hand and throw it down toward third base. And they could always see the hole in it, for it is too big not to be noticed. Time and again it has been asked why Wagner doesn't buy a new glove. You ask Hans that question and he will only say that he has no money to pay for one. But back of that there is the one fact that remains always prominent-Waguer is just as superstitious or sentimental as any other ball player, and be has always felt that the Herman Long glove has brought him luck. That's why he hangs on to it. It is worn to a frazzle. There is nothing to it but the bare edges. The center is all worn away, and Wagner grabs those hard line drives really with the bare

I am always At Cincinnati, Cincinnati 6, New York 5. makes perfect. Take, for instance, when I have a batting slump. I don't worry about it. I just get out in the mornings at the ball park and practice hitting against all kinds of twirling. I like to stand up to the plate and whale away at every old kind of pitching. Some of the boys are ensy to hit, while others are not. It all helps me to recover my batting eye. Southpaw pitchers gave me considerable trouble at one time, but that was before I entered the big league. They never even bother me nowadays. Just watch me at the plate and you'll a right handed twirler I crowd the more commission. At Washington, Washington 8, Cleve- rubber and step into a curve before it brenks. When men are on bases I generally ny for the first ball the twirler hands over. It's dollars to doughnuts that if he can lay that first one straight over the pan he'll do it, and I sonk quite a few of them. The majority of batters will pass up the first ball, no matter if it cuts the plate in half. But you'll never get Tyrus overlooking any of hat kind. Nine times out of ten I go o the plate prepared to hit the first ball if the pitcher lays it over.

I never take a long swing at the phere any more. I like to do it, but ou can't get unything in the major eagues swinging the willow. In the old days the great batters were Pete Browning, Ed Delebanty, Dan Brouthers and Pop Anson, who wung on to a ball with the force of a hammer. Were any of them in the big leagues today the modern twirlers would make 'em look like jokes.

You cannot grab a wagon tongue down at the bandle, reach back and awing halfway around for a curve pitcher. He'd make you look foolish, and you wouldn't have enough batting sverage at the end of the month to get your name in the percentage column. The star batters of today grab their patting sticks a foot or more from the bandle and, instead of swinging, aim at the leather, but I can't afford to
